someone ringing the doorbell throughout the warm months, hoping to sell you something.

Sometimes these situations are harmless. Sometimes the sales tactics go way overboard with aggressive intimidation, dishonesty, and bullying, and could even be a platform for illegal activity.

The safest way to handle door-to-door salespeople is this: be wary. Just because they appear clean-cut and wear a monogrammed shirt doesn't make them legitimate. Far too often, innocent people are being scammed or the home is actually being cased.

We recommend that you treat each stranger at your door as just that: a stranger. It is best to proceed with caution in such cases, knowing that the person standing in front of you may not be who they say they are, and may not even have an verifiable job, with reasonable training or guidelines for ethics and customer service. Or, their job entails pressuring you or lying to you to get you to sign a sales contract.

Every year we hear from our customers who have had a knock at the door from an out of state alarm sales company.

If you hear anyone try to make claims about your Guardian account or your security system who is not a Guardian representative, be aware of unfortunate and high pressure sales tactics. We are proud to explain in detail the excellent products and services we consistently offer to Alaskans, so if you have questions about your account, please give us a call.

As Alaska's only full service security company we are proud to install, service, monitor, guard and patrol our Alaskan neighbors.

Alarm Response with Guardian Security

Alarm Response is a subscription-based service that makes sense for many of our business owners and home owners, particularly those who travel, who have vacation homes that are unoccupied for long periods of time, or who have businesses that have predictable business hours. In all of these situations, an empty house or vacation residence, or the office after everyone has gone home for the day are vulnerable to break-ins and burglaries.

Sending update requests just to your sales consultant or a single Guardian employee may slow down the process if they are on vacation or unavailable.

One answer to this is the security alarm system, and should the system go into alarm, whether you are out of town or home in bed, Alarm Response provides an on-site check to your property. Once Guardian receives the alarm signal, a security guard is sent to physically check for suspicious activity or appearance. You or your designated emergency contact will still be called, but in the meantime, security can assess the situation and alert proper authorities should further action be taken.

Speak with a Guardian Security Consultant today to see if Alarm Response makes sense for you!

Are you ready for smart innovation?

Many of our customers have enjoyed our state-of-the-art security systems, and the peace of mind they provide, for many years. We at Guardian strive to offer the latest in alarm system technology, which means we are constantly adding to our inventory and researching the best the industry has to offer.

However, just because your system has worked well for years doesn't mean it is still the best thing out there. Did you know we offer systems that provide automated home operations and smartphone management capabilities? For those whose system is connected to a land line cellular and radio capabilities are also available.

Did you know your security system can provide more than an alarm that sends emergency signals to our local Central Station.

If it has been a little while since your system has seen an upgrade, it may be time to explore the new options. Our consultants are fully current on the latest technology and which components might help you get more security coverage and more bang for your buck. You can schedule a free consultation at your earliest convenience.

As always, our goal at Guardian is to keep you as safe as possible. We are happy to provide a review of your current setup and discuss whether we offer something that will help you get the most out of your security alarm system. Verify that your system is working efficiently for you, or see about adding another layer of security by scheduling an appointment with a Guardian Consultant today.
